Planning Commissioners Journal

For Citizen Planners

The Planning Commissioners Journal is the nation's principal publication for citizen planners, including members of local and regional planning commissions and zoning boards. Over 7,500 citizen planners in all 50 states receive the PCJ.

Articles in the PCJ are written and edited to be clear & understandable to non-professionals, and are formatted in an attractive, easy-to-read style.

"Each issue contains pertinent information presented in a concise, highly readable format … The PCJ is just the right tool to keep members of all my boards abreast of current issues, not to mention me!"

— John M. Lawler
Community Development Director
City of Norcross, Georgia

"Without question the best source of down-to-earth, practical information I have ever seen for lay commissioners … The PCJ should be required reading for all planning and zoning commissioners."

— Marcia A. Banach
Director of Planning, Town of South Windsor, Connecticut

"The PCJ has been a valuable tool for our county for the last decade and has helped my commissioners keep up with the rapidly changing field of planning."

— Tim Porter
Executive Director, Vigo County Area Plan Commission
Terre Haute, Indiana

"The Planning Commissioners Journal is without a doubt THE 'must have' publication for planning commissioners and elected officials. The conversational style of the Journal's nationally-recognized columnists makes learning fun as well as highly informative."

— Connie Cooper, FAICP
Planning consultant and past national president of the American Planning Association

Informative & Wide-Ranging

The PCJ covers a wide range of planning issues, focusing on how citizen planners can work most effectively. You'll find topics such as: how to deal with the media; the basics of putting together a comprehensive plan; conflicts of interest & ex-parte communications; transportation planning; running an effective meeting; developing good staff-commissioner relations – and many, many more.

"We have subscribed to the PCJ since its inception in 1991. It has filled a void and been a great help to the Commission, not only because of the timely and well-written articles, but also because it has helped the Commissioners understand their role and that they are not alone in the tough issues they face."

— Ed Evans

Planning Director, City of Aiken, South Carolina

Designed for "Citizen Planners"

Our objective is to provide concise information designed to make planning commissioners more comfortable – and effective – in their role. Editor Wayne Senville brings a background as a professional planner, as well as nine years' service as a planning commissioner, to his job of ensuring that the PCJ's content is tailored to meet the needs of planning board members.

"The Planning Commissioners Journal presents issues in a way that commission members can relate to."

— William K. Spaeth

Deputy Director of Community Development, City of Aurora, Illinois

"Our planning commission has stated many times that the PCJ is their favorite publication. They are impressed at how much it speaks to their specific needs and viewpoints."

— Charleine Sell

City of Woodinville (Washington) Planning Commission

An Excellent Resource

The Planning Commissioners Journal will serve as a valuable resource for members of your planning board, giving them background and perspectives on planning issues they face. Many of our subscribers tell us the PCJ plays a key role in their planning commissioner training efforts.

"The most valuable publication I have seen for the citizen commissioner. It is an excellent training and educational tool. ... As chairman of my planning commission, I depend on it and highly recommend it to all planning commissioners, zoning boards, and governing officials."

— William E. Moore, Jr.

Director, Virginia Citizens Planning Association, and Chairman, South Hill Planning Commission

Reasonably Priced

You'll receive the Planning Commissioners Journal four times a year. Each twenty-page issue includes a half-dozen or more concise, jargon-free articles and columns.

Over half of our subscribers order multiple subscriptions, enabling individual members of their commissions and boards to receive their own copy of the PCJ. Take advantage of our special pricing for this affordable option.

"Timely and relevant issues in an enjoyable format. The Planning Commissioners Journal is a wonderfully effective on-going training tool for rookie Commissioners, as well as experienced hands. And it's very reasonably priced."

— Greg Hoch

Director, Durango, Colorado
Planning & Community Development
